

Do you have sensitive documents that need destroying?

- In today's legal, commercial and social circumstances it is essential that confidential records are properly and safely destroyed.
- Even documents stored on a computer may circulate as hard copy, and these, combined with other paper items such as phone messages, notes, memoranda etc, provide an opportunity for the theft of useful information.
- Privacy protection is one of the most controversial and most talked about business practices by the media and has become increasingly important for all Australians. The privacy laws affect all of us at work and at home.
- It is not practical/economical (and normally not possible) to destroy large volumes of bulky documents by office shredders. They are expensive, labour intensive and of limited capacity.
